Prospect Hill Cemetery

PREFACE

Prospect Hill Cemetery in Brattleboro, Windham County, Vermont, once called the Old Village Burying Ground, sits at the top of the hill on what is now called South Main Street. This is such a large cemetery that you almost feel as you move from one part to the next, that you are in many different burial grounds. As you drive up South Main and come to the brow of the hill, you can look to your left and there on the northernmost section, almost falling onto the sidewalk are the very earliest stones. These ancient, uneven rows of stones stand with dignity, defying nature and the human hand from destroying them. Many are gone, yet many more have survived, including the earliest burial. As you work your way through this section, the stones are intermixed with many newer ones. The past linking with the present through death.

A part of the section beside this earliest one has often been called the Pauper's plot. Many of these stones are broken, fallen and many unreadable. There are large expanses where it is obvious people were buried and either no stones were ever placed there or it have long since fallen and are now gone. The names of the people and their inscriptions make you want to know who they were and how they died. Here you find an old worn stone that reads, "William James, died 4 July 1861, ae 23 years, born a slave at Norfolk, Va.," other stones bearing only a name, date of death and "died at the Asylum" as their legacy. There are so many children that you wonder if they were all victims of some epidemic. This is a sad part of the cemetery. One thinks of the inscription of Nancy Warner and the entry in the Town Clerk's records of her death, "died at the Town Poor Farm, no relatives known." Below this section and several others to the south of it, is the back cemetery road.

Across this road are more sections of plots, some now beginning to take form with monuments. Walking east you come to the top of a hill and can look down onto the easternmost edge of the cemetery which begins at the top of a very steep, wooded hill looking down onto the road leading to the town of Vernon. At this edge is a relatively small section of stones and small monuments, surrounded on three sides by trees and on the fourth side by two tiers of stones that lead up to the main part of the cemetery. When standing in this section one feels almost as though you are standing in a small cemetery in a little country town. There is a quietness here as the birds land on the stones and chipmunks hop to and fro. The noises from the street above and below are almost muffled out by the hillside of brush, trees and stones. This section seems to not be kept up as well as the ones above and yet it is quaint. Above this, and crossing back across the cemetery road are more sections of plots. Here on the edge of one of the cemetery roads, we begin to find many notable people and their families, such as the Tyler's, the Crosby's, the Frost's.

From here going south, the sections are divided by more cemetery roads. The stones, and plots are more recent and seem well cared for although there are still many that have succumbed to the elements and are almost unreadable. There is a very large Estey plot and as large, a Bradley plot. Names that are well-known to anyone spending any time in Brattleboro. At the back edge of these sections, is another back cemetery road which the ones going east to west run into. Across this road is a long strip with plots one and two deep, and moving more southerly the plots become larger and the rows of stones change to very large monuments. These were the affluent, the people who were able to honor their dead with very large memorials. As this section curves around and moves to the west along a road, you come to the most famous memorial in Prospect Hill Cemetery, that of Col. Jim Fisk. This elaborate memorial has a sculpted face of it's most famous burial, that of the Colonel. The face, unfortunately has been worn so it is almost unrecognizable. On all four sides sit life size statues of women depicting aspects of the life of Col. Fisk. There are steps leading to the base of the monument. In the plot surrounding this monument are smaller stones belonging to other members of the Fisk family.

Beyond the Fisk monument are more unique monuments, ending at a small plot of grass that leads down the hill to the south. Walking down, you pass the old vault, built into the hillside, once used to house the dead until burial, now used as a tool shed. And beyond this you come to another unexpected section of burials. This also cannot be seen from the road and is surrounded on three sides by trees that sit on the edge of a bank that follows around the three sides. These plots seem to be very crowded and almost placed haphazardly. It is feels almost like this section was an after thought in planning the plots. There are some small older and almost unreadable stones mixed among newer and very small monuments. Climbing up the hill from this section is another part of this section which includes a few civil war stones that were not placed in the Soldier's plot for some reason.

On the brow of this hill lies the Soldier's plot. This is a section of rows of identical small white stones, each giving name, rank, company and state of enlistment. The soldiers buried in this plot all died in 1864. There are 18 stones, all but two soldiers were from states other than Vermont. These soldiers died in the Union Hospital that was opened in Brattleboro in 1863 with the help of then Governor Frederick Holbrook. In 1930 this plot was recognized by the Veteran's Administration as an official United States government burial ground.

Beyond the Soldier's plot, following the cemetery road, heading west to South Main street are single and double rows of plots with stones and small monuments. Behind these, below a stone wall and at the southernmost section of the cemetery land are a few more plots. All of the plots in Prospect Hill Cemetery have been sold. There are many plots that have not been filled and so several times a year a burial will take place there.

The earliest known purchase of land for this cemetery that can be found in the Land Records kept in Brattleboro Town Clerk's Office.

More land was purchased through the period of 1804 to 1869 when the land was set aside for the Soldier's plot. It has been stated in "The Annals of Brattleboro" that Joseph Clark's wife was the first burial. Freedom (Alexander) Clark, wife of Joseph Clark, died the 3rd of April in 1796 at the age of 35 and was buried in the oldest section of the cemetery. For Abstracts of the purchases of land for the cemetery see pages i - iv.

The cemetery has remained very much like it was in the past, with the exception of the removal of fences, some tree removals and the discontinuance of the use of some of the roads that once ran between some of the sections. Evidence of these roads, although now grown over with grass, can still be seen. It is not known exactly when the cemetery left the hands of the Town Selectmen and became the responsibility of the Prospect Hill Cemetery Association, however, the town resumed the care of the grounds 10-15 years ago. The total responsibility of its care is soon to be turned back to the Town of Brattleboro.

Prospect Hill Cemetery

Comments & Numbering Key

The gravestones in this book have been recorded in Sections. Each Section has been assigned either a number or a letter. The numbered sections correspond to the ones that are in the largest part of the cemetery which runs from the north to the south, each of these with one edge running along South Main Street. The lettered sections correspond to the ones that are the edges of these main sections. Most being on the other side of the main cemetery road from the main sections. Each stone is given a Section number and a stone number. Care was taken to try to place those buried in the same plot together and these plots have been divided by a dotted line. This was very hard to do in the old parts of the cemetery. A Section is considered a group of plots. A plot is a group of stones.

In deciding what constituted a stone as opposed to a monument, care was taken to decide the number of people listed on the stone, size of stone, the absence or presence of headstones, and the type of stone. Thus many smaller stones were often considered to be monuments. A flush stone is a stone that is even with the ground. If a stone or monument was either broken, worn or in bad shape, this has been noted.

If it was possible to find the maiden name of a spouse, this has been added in italics, if not already on the stone. Any other information found that was not on the stone but could be helpful to the genealogist, this was added in italics set within brackets. In other words, anything in italics was not on the stone itself. The extra information came from many sources, however, most was from the record's in the Brattleboro Town Clerk's Office, the Annals of Brattleboro, histories of the towns where the family came from or family histories (see references). Because this cemetery was so large, it created a tremendous amount of research to acquire more information, thus each italicized item is not referenced with a source. If anyone would like to have the source of the extra information, feel free to contact the author of this book to obtain it.

As for the headstones and footstones, it was often impossible to tell exactly what they were, so in listing them, they were all listed in the following manner: [also small stone "Mary"]. These are mostly stones which correspond to a monument. Many stones were hard to read or unreadable. The author has made every attempt to identify each stone or to give as much information as could be read in hopes that some day these too can be identified. If anyone has any information on the unidentified stones or discovers a mistake that was made in reading a stone, please contact the author.

There is a complete alphabetical, all name index at the back of this book which provides a cross-reference to maiden names.

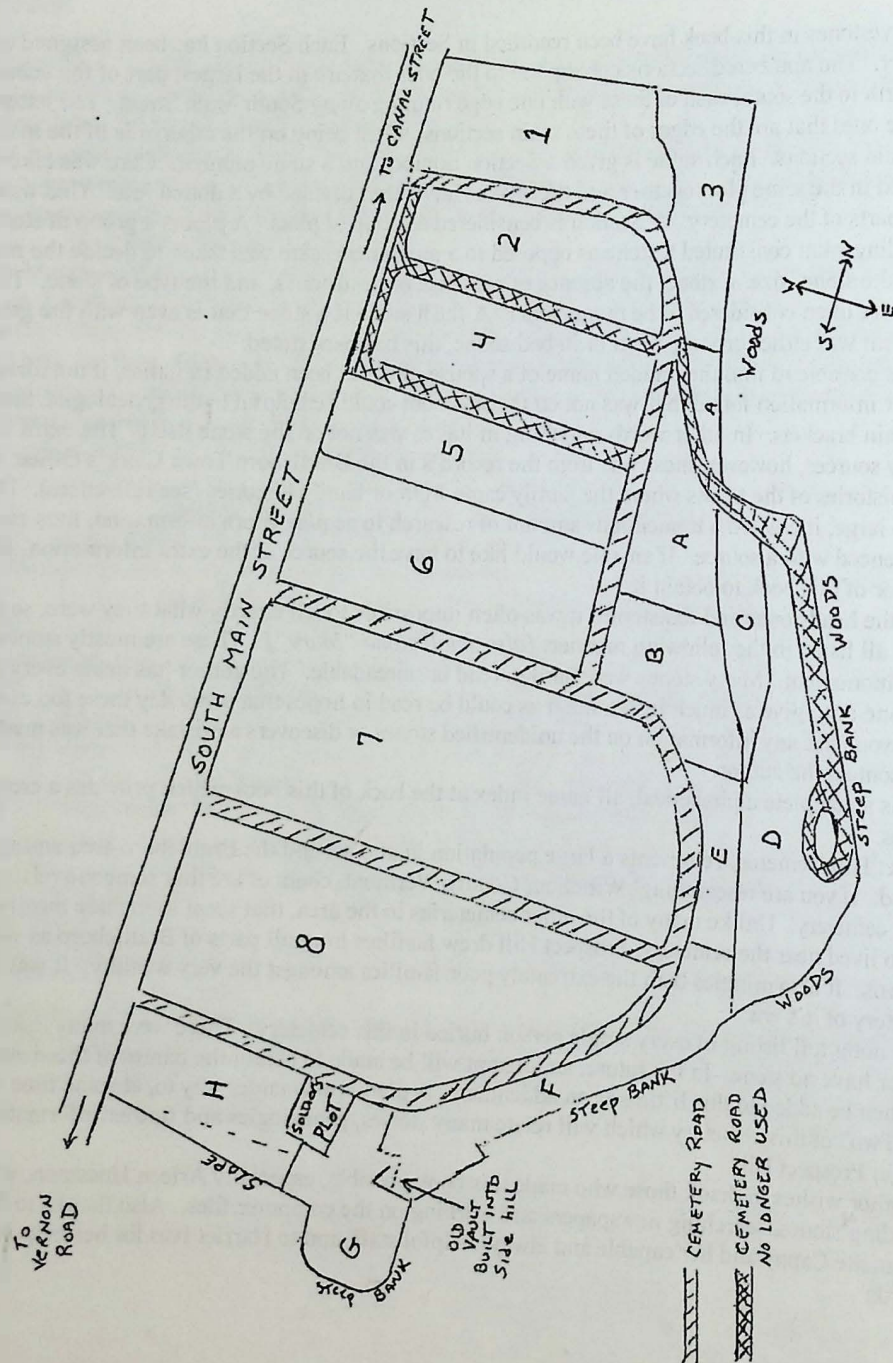

Prospect Hill Cemetery represents a large population in and around the Brattleboro area and spans a very large time period. If you are researching Windham County, Vermont, chances are that someone related to your family is in this cemetery. Unlike many of the other cemeteries in the area, that seem to include mostly burials of the families who lived near the cemetery, Prospect Hill drew families from all parts of Brattleboro as well as neighboring towns. It also mingles both the extremely poor families amongst the very wealthy. It was clearly the most used cemetery of its era.

This is not a full listing of every single person buried in this cemetery. There were many stones missing, unidentifiable, or have no stone. In the future, an attempt will be made to obtain the names of these missing burials and these will then be added to this listing as an addendum. A plan is also under way to, at some time in the future, create a "Book Two" of this cemetery which will relate many stories, genealogies and further information on the families buried in Prospect Hill.

The author wishes to thank those who made this book possible, especially Arleen Huesman, who spent many hours reading stones, searching newspapers and working on the computer files. Also thanks to Brattleboro Town Clerk, Annette Cappy and her capable and always helpful staff, and to Harriet Ives for her help in researching the Town Records'.

Section H

Dying is a troublesome business: there is pain to be suffered, and it wrings one's heart; but death is a splendid thing—a warfare accomplished, a beginning all over again, a triumph. You can always see that in their faces.

George Bernard Shaw (1856–1950), Anglo-Irish playwright, critic. Letter of condolence, 5 July 1913 (published in Bernard Shaw: Collected Letters, vol. 3, 1965). Shaw added: "And come and close my eyes too, when I die; and see me with my mask off as I really was."

BRATTLEBORO RETREAT BURIALS

The following names were taken from the first section of the old book that is kept at the Brattleboro Retreat, once called "The Vermont Asylum, called "The Old Burying Ground: An early journal dated back to the 1830's." The first page in this book says that the following people, who died at the Vermont Asylum, were buried at the "The Old Burying Ground." Prospect Hill was once called the "Old Village Burial Ground." The names of nine of the people on this list have been found on stones at Prospect Hill. There is a lot of room in the area that they were buried in. The ground is raised as though many more people were once buried in this area, probably without stones, so it is almost certain that the rest of the people listed with them on the first page of the book, were also buried at Prospect Hill. The old burial book gave no more than the names of the dead. No dates were given. From 1846 to about 1900, many of the patient's at the Asylum were buried in a cemetery on the Asylum grounds. However, stones of other people who died at the Asylum throughout the years, have been found in other sections of Prospect Hill. This has been noted on their entries in this book on Prospect Hill Cemetery.

September 2000 - BRATTLEBORO AREA CEMETERY LISTINGS

To: BRATTLEBORO, WINDHAM CO., VERMONT area historians and genealogists.

Announcing the publication of three valuable new books on burials in Brattleboro, Vermont. These books are important to anyone researching both Brattleboro and also many neighboring towns. Many people who died in Brattleboro, also buried their relatives who were from neighboring towns in their plots. Collateral families are in abundance in these publications. If your family lived in or around Windham County, these are the books to have. More burial books from this area are planned for the future, along with a second in the Prospect Hill Burial series, "The People of Prospect Hill Cemetery," that will include vignettes, genealogies and military information.

1.] "Gravestone Listings of Prospect Hill Cemetery, Brattleboro, Vt.", compiled by Marjorie V. Howe. This book is 8.5"x11" spiral bound, paper cover, printed double-sided, approximately 220 pages. History and deed compilation of cemetery included as well as copy of early map which has been marked as to Sections used for the book. The stones are printed in family groupings where possible. Much information has been included that was not on the stones such as maiden names of wives, places of death, if not Brattleboro, names of parent's of those buried. The cemetery also includes a Soldier's Section that is the burial place of the Civil War soldiers who died at the Civil War hospital in Brattleboro in 1864. All but two of these men are from places other than Vermont. Earliest burial is 1796 and although all plots have been sold, there are about one to two burials a year in Prospect Hill. Included is an all name index with approximately 1150 surnames. Price $32.50 which includes first class postage and handling ($3.50)

2.] "Gravestone Inscriptions of Locust Ridge Cemetery, Brattleboro, Windham Co., Vt.", compiled by Marjorie V. Howe, 1999. This book is 8.5"x11", double side printing, paper-covered, spiral bound, 72 pages. This cemetery was one of the earliest in Brattleboro, Vt., having it's beginnings on the land of Benjamin Butterfield. It has the stone of Col. John Sargent, well-known Revolutionary War soldier and many of his family members. Other early families included amongst many others are Hadley, Wilder, Bemis, French, Frost. The first recorded burial in Locust Ridge is of Susannah (Spaulding) Butterfield, in 1776. The cemetery includes a newer section that is still being used for burials as well as a soldier's section. History, deed information and maps are included as well as an every name index of 1600+ people. Over 400 surnames are listed. Price is $12.00 which does not include $3.50 for first class postage and handling.

3.] "A Record of Burials at the Vermont Asylum, Later known as the Brattleboro Retreat, 1837-1900," (also includes record of deaths during this period as listed in Brattleboro Town Clerk's Office), Compiled by Marjorie Valliere Howe. This is a spiral bound, paper covered, one side printing, 8.5"x11", 55 pages. Included in this book is a history of what is known about the Asylum/Retreat Burial's. The information on this subject is not clear and it seems that as time goes on, more information becomes clear. This will be an ongoing pursuit by the author to verify the burials. This first printing includes what was copied at the Brattleboro Retreat by the author from an old ledger held by the Retreat. As far as I know this book is not available for public perusal. It gives vague facts as to where these people were buried but does give an 800+ listing of burials. Also included in this authors book is a listing of the deaths as recorded in the Brattleboro Town Clerk's records. This information would be important to those who are aware of relatives who were inmates at the institution during this period, however may not answer all questions. The book is $10.00 plus $3.50 first class postage and handling.

If 2 or more books are ordered please send $3.50 P&H for first book and $1.00 P&H for each other ordered. Also if 2 or more books are ordered please subtract discount of $3.50 from order.
